

3-point answer:

In this gripping 1998 war film, just as two U.S. soldiers plant sticky bombs on a passing German tank, you can see two dark grease stains on the front wheels. Someone on the set obviously forgot to wipe them off after a previous rehearsal or take.

4-point answer:

As he sprints across a 13th-century battlefield, the character William Wallace brandishes a hammer, then nothing, then a giant sword, then the hammer, then the sword. If his final weapon had been a Pee-wee Herman doll, it wouldn't have fazed me in the least.

5-point answer:

In the snowy morning that follows the opening battle with the Germans, Maximus feeds an apple to a horse. The only problem is, in the background there's a crew member in jeans who doesn't back out of the way fast enough.

Expert Analysis of Your Score:0-3 points

I could randomly shoot 20 paint balls at titles in a video shop and score higher. What the heck are you doing with your life? Exercising at the gym? Spending quality time with the family? Watch more movies!

4-9 points

You've seen just enough to be dangerous in a trivia contest — dangerous to your own team, that is. Like my mom insisting that Dick Kelly played the lead in Singin' in the Rain. Dick Kelly was an insurance agent who worked with my dad.

10-19 points

Not bad. You got the obvious answers plus a few tougher ones. You're a $32,000 player on Who Wants to Be a Millionaire.

20-24 points

Cool. Let's order a beer and talk about who's been ripped off at the Oscars.

25-30 points

I bow down to you, movie maniac. It's May, by the way... 2001. Take a break from the tube, open the curtains and let some sun in.

Back to Top

For shipping time and available formats, see product detail pages.

Content in part copyright © 1948-2000 Muze, Inc. All rights reserved.

TERMS OF SERVICE & LEGAL NOTICES PRIVACY POLICY

Copyright © 2000-2001 Best Buy.
For personal, noncommercial use only.